THE CHALLENGE

As consumers take on more responsibility for healthcare costs, providers are coming under greater pressure to provide convenient payment options that efficiently integrate with office operations and limit risk. From traditional paper checks to credit, debit and prepaid cards, consumers use a variety of options to pay for retail goods and services, and they prefer the same options when paying for out-of-pocket healthcare costs. The challenge for office managers and practitioners is determining what types of payment options to provide, and how to provide them.

THE SOLUTION

For more than 10 years, the American Medical Association (AMA) and TSYS Merchant Solutions have been working to expand physicians' payment options without disrupting clinic practices. As AMA's sponsored provider of payment acceptance services, TSYS Merchant Solutions has helped more than 7,000 AMA member practices affordably and effectively accept card-based patient payments.

"Physicians' time is very valuable. The last thing they need to worry about is office finances," said Brian

Eagleston, Director of Affinity Programs, AMA. "With TSYS Merchant Solutions we're able to offer our members a way to accept card payments, streamline back office processes, and cut the time they need to focus on finances so they can spend more time on patient care."

AMA members expanding their payment options have improved collections and increased cash flow since there is no waiting for paper checks to arrive or clear. Risk, paperwork and operating costs have also been reduced because the card authorization process protects against fraud and the paperwork associated with accepting checks is eliminated.

Additional benefits of accepting credit, debit and prepaid cards include:

- The ability to set up recurring payments for monthly payment options
- Reduced receivables
- Lower billing-related expenses
- A more efficient and faster patient check-in process

In addition to card processing services, TSYS Merchant Solutions offers AMA members prepaid card issuing and management solutions for a variety of prepaid programs, including payroll, employee incentives and patient rewards.
